NG PLAYER

Evolution begins with training individualization.

At TNGS, we prioritize the development of each athlete's unique skills and abilities. Our training program is tailored to the individual's age, progress, and skill level. By setting personal goals and working at their own pace, athletes are guided by our coaches to achieve success.

We focus on individual strengths and work to minimize skill deficiencies. Our approach is based on the Competence Model for Athletes, created by the University Polytechnical of Valencia. This model allows for goal setting and provides a quick and clear visualization of progress on the field.

Competence Model

Assessment, evaluation and improvement are easier with the Competence Model for Athletes developed by The Next Generation Sports (TNGS) and the Polytechnic University of Valencia.

This tool is based on a study of more than 140 football players from European clubs. If what we want is that a player should be the best forward we just have to compare his competences with outstanding forwards in the same category, and based on this, design his training plan

Goal Settings

Short, medium and long term objectives, achievement through self-knowledge and work.

After evaluating player's competences and skills, both the player and his coach set the goals for the season. Once the objectives are established, the coach assigns weekly target- orientated tasks which the player should carry out to achieve his goals.

01 Individualize trainings

Technical, tactical, physical, and psychological sessions are focusing on the player's personal improvement.

02 Team training sessions

03 Competences profiles

Tool to assess each player's competences and design specific tasks for their improvement.
